

Biography for Andrew Lindsay

Andrew Lindsay has been a teacher and administrator for the Van Buren Public Schools since 1997. He currently serves as the Assistant Principal at Owen Intermediate School in Belleville, Michigan where he received a number of local and state awards. In 2019, Andy was recognized by the Michigan Elementary and Middle School Principal's Association (MEMSPA) as Assistant Principal of the Year for the State of Michigan. He attended Eastern Michigan University on a Presidential Scholarship, which is the highest academic award offered at EMU. After Andrew's first year of teaching, he was named the Sallie Mae Outstanding First Year Teacher for the state of Michigan and traveled to Washington, DC to receive his award. Five years later in 2002, he was awarded the Michigan Social Studies Teacher of the Year by the Michigan Council for the Social Studies. Also in 2002, Andrew was featured on National Public Radio in a segment about teaching the First Amendment. Andrew's passions are leadership, productivity, and the Detroit Lions...who rarely show much in the areas of leadership nor productivity.
