David Fainstein, M.A., is a doctoral candidate at the University of Oregon and graduate employee at the Center on Teaching and Learning. David's research interests align with the delivery of system-wide assessment frameworks, interventions, and teacher professional development to support the acquisition of academic skills.